Document Scotland

Beyond the Border: New Contemporary Photography from Scotland

1 July to 27 September 2014

Set against the backdrop of the historic referendum on Scotland's independence Beyond the Border brings together work by Document Scotland, four Scottish photographers, each with a distinct view of a nation in the midst of intense debate about its future.

One of the most significant exhibitions of new Scottish photography in a generation, Beyond the Border sets out to challenge Caledonian clichés and Scottish stereotypes. It pays tribute to the country's rich history and celebrated landscape bringing together a story of modern-day Scotland and its diaspora.

Sophie Gerrard's Drawn to the Land is an intimate look at the role women play in shaping the rural Scottish landscape. From Highland crofters to Lowland farmers, Gerrard explores how their lives interconnect with the land in which they live and work.

Stephen McLaren's series of portraits reveals a world of Americans with Scottish ancestry who retain a close affinity with the 'Auld Country', even though they may never set foot there. American Always, Scottish Forever depicts athletes, musicians and visitors attending the Highland Games season in California.

Colin McPherson presents A Fine Line, a year-long exploration of the physical border that separates Scotland from England; examining and questioning the very nature of this frontier through its changing landscape and people.

Jeremy Sutton-Hibbert's Edge of an Empire brings history to life in a study of the Antonine Wall, the northern most frontier of the Roman Empire, as the wall crosses through the central belt of Scotland attracting visitors and living history groups alike.

The work in Beyond the Border is neither overtly political nor partisan, and aims to record and disseminate ideas and themes surrounding this pivotal moment in a nation's history.
