

Being Inbetween

Welcome Gallery Explorers!

Welcome to the virtual gallery trail that you can complete at home. It's time to get your thinking caps on and to start exploring the virtual exhibition Being Inbetween. This shows the work of photographer Carolyn Mendelsohn, and reveals the hopes and dreams of a group of girls aged between 10 and 12.

You can find the virtual exhibition on our website:

Let's get started!

Time to get looking

Your first task as a gallery explorer is to find these photographs in the virtual exhibition. Tick the boxes when you find them.

Listen carefully

There is a sound clip playing in the VR of the girls in the photographs talking about themselves. Listening very carefully to the girls talking, can you write down as many answers for the following questions:

What were the different hobbies or likes mentioned?

What were the different fears or dislikes mentioned?

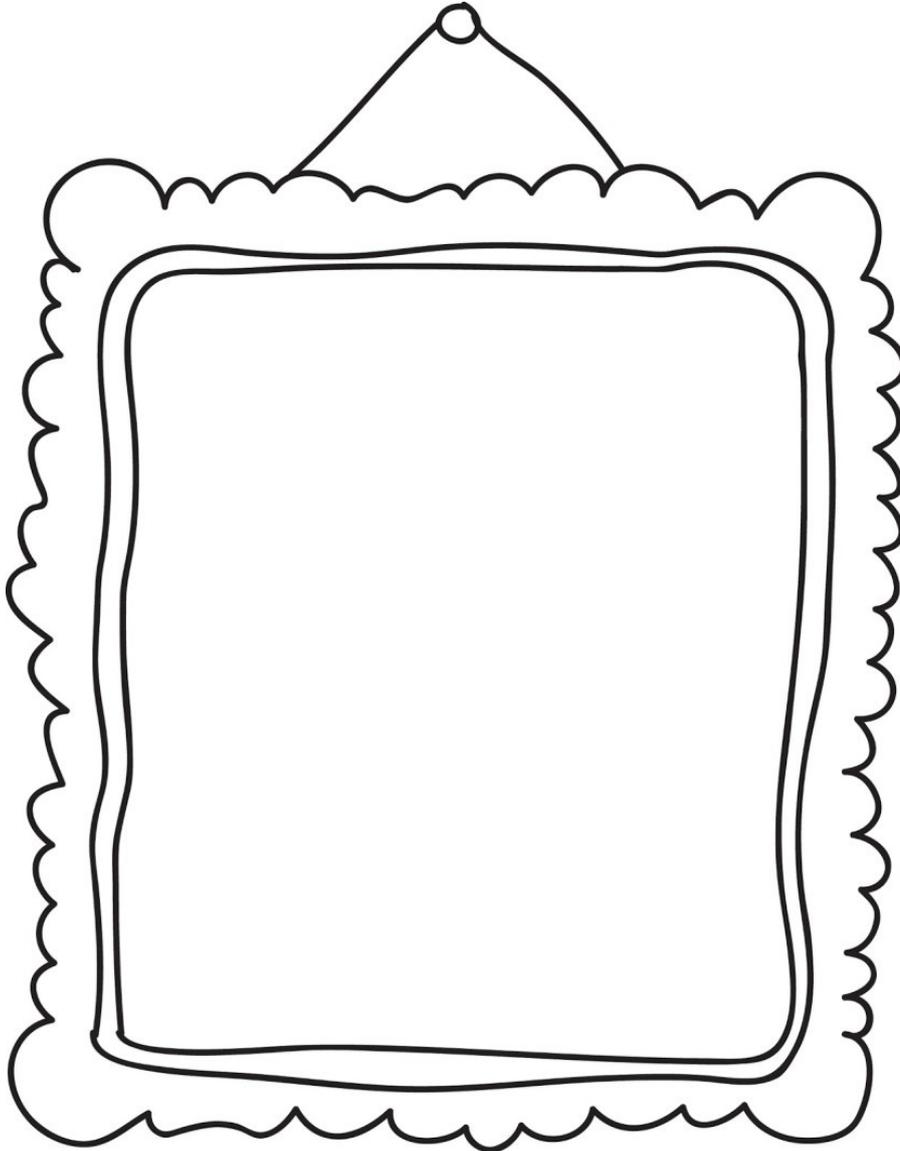

.....

What do some of the girls want to be when they grow up?

.....

Your Self Portrait

A self portrait is something you create of yourself, you can use photography, painting, drawing and other ways to capture your own personality and identity. Use the space provided to draw your self portrait.

Looking at the information about Being Inbetween on the wall in the VR, answer the following questions:

How many girls were involved with Being Inbetween?

How long did it take Carolyn Mendelsohn to create Being Inbetween?

Girl Power

Girl Power is a film made by New Focus, Impressions Gallery's young people's collective. The film focuses on three of the girls from Being Inbetween and explores their identity.

Firstly, can you find where the film is in the VR? It should be next to one of the portraits.

Now that you've watched the film, has it made you think about your identity and where you see yourself in the future? Fill in the bubbles below with your own answers.
